CAPSULE SUMMARY 2395 Old Washington Road (CH: 581) Charles County, Maryland

Built in the 1920s, Midway RV Supply originally served as a service station. The Hintze family owned the commercial establishment for over sixty years, from 1932 until 1996. Deed research indicates that, from the early 1930s, the Hintze family also owned the modest Craftsman style bungalow at nearby 2380 Old Washington Road. Vernacular in style, the service station reflects the influence of the automobile on American roadside architecture during the early 20th century. The building has a one-part commercial block plan.

Set on a level lot surrounded by a gravel parking lot, the former service station is one-story in height and three bays in width. Rectangular in plan, the building is set on a concrete block foundation and constructed of smooth-faced concrete blocks that are clad with stucco on the facade. A one-story, three-bay wide porch extends across the façade. A front gable roof with a stepped parapet covers the building and an interior brick chimney rises from the southwest roof slope.

Located at 2395 Old Washington Road, the former service station is set on a level lot surrounded by a gravel parking lot. Constructed in the 1920s, the service station is one-story in height and three bays in width. Rectangular in plan, the building is set on a concrete block foundation and constructed of smooth-faced concrete blocks that are clad with stucco on the facade. A one-story, three-bay wide porch extends across the façade. A front gable roof with a stepped parapet covers the building and an interior brick chimney rises from the southwest roof slope.

EXTERIOR DESCRIPTION:

The façade, or southeast elevation of the building, is three bays wide. Paired and triple fixed, one-light windows with rowlock sills flank the centered entry. The single leaf, wood door is sixpaneled. The stepped gable parapet roof rises above the roofline, with a rowlock brick cap. The one-story, three-bay wide porch has a shed roof. It is supported by turned wood posts and turned wood brackets. The porch supports are set in poured concrete footers.

The concrete block walls of the northeast elevation are not clad in stucco, like the façade. Two multi-light metal casement windows with rowlock sills flank the garage door. The roll-up garage door features forty wood panels and a sagging wood lintel. The roof, which is partially reclad with asphalt shingles, has exposed rafter tails.

The rear or northwest elevation features concrete block construction and wide eaves. Two multi-light metal casement windows flank the centered entry, which is wood paneled with one light. The light in the entry has been boarded shut. The gable end has been painted with the words MIDWAY RV  PARTS & SERVICE.

The southwest elevation, featuring concrete block construction, is pierced by three multi-light metal casement windows with rowlock sills. These windows have been boarded shut. The forty-paneled wood roll-up garage door has a wood lintel. Exposed rafter tails adorn the roof and an interior brick chimney with a corbeled cap rises from the roof slope.

Deed research indicates that, from the early 1930s, the Hintze family also owned the modest Craftsman style bungalow at nearby 2380 Old Washington Road. Though vernacular in style, the service station reflects the influence of the automobile on American roadside architecture during the early 20th century. The building has a one-part commercial block plan.

The emergence of gas stations to serve the needs of millions of drivers formed a large part of this new development. During the 1920s, instead of purchasing cans of gasoline or pulling up to a curbside dispenser, the owner drove the car off the road and under a canopy where gas was pumped. At this time, service stations sought to gain new customers by offering an ever-wider range of services such as oil checks, window cleaning, and car repairs. Early service stations often resemble small cottages with front gable roofs and an extension or canopy leading towards the gasoline pumps. Like these other service stations built in the first quarter of the 20th century, this building features a gable roof with a stepped parapet and a front porch that nearly covers the width of the façade.

Automobiles and the expanding road and highway systems contributed to widespread suburbanization well beyond rail corridors during the Modern Period. As development and population density increased in Prince George's and Charles County, new road networks were erected to ease the movement of goods and people. From the 1930s to present day, Crain Highway, and its successor U.S. 301, brought increased traffic through Prince George's and Charles Counties, which in turn encouraged commercial development along its length. The commercial development along the routes often took the form of entertainment establishments and travel-related services. extension of Crain Highway to the Potomac and the completion of the Governor Harry W. Nice Memorial Bridge spanning the Potomac River near Pope's Creek in 1940 served to link Charles and Prince George's Counties with transportation networks from Florida to New York.

National Register Evaluation:

The service station at 2395 Old Washington Road is not eligible due to the fact that it does not meet National Register Criteria A, B, Preliminary research has not revealed any association between the building and events that have made a significant contribution to the broad patterns of our history (Criterion A) or the lives of persons significant in our past (Criterion B). Although the building provides an example of vernacular rural architecture, it is neither unusual nor distinguished; it does not represent the work of a master or display high artistic merit (Criterion C). There is no evidence that the property is likely to yield information important in history or prehistory (Criterion D). Thus, the property is not National Register-eligible.
